

As November approaches, my mind starts turning to the day we almost lost Adam and the pain he had to endure, as a family we work to follow Adam's amazingly positive attitude and when November 10th arrives, we celebrate the fact that he beat the odds and not only survived, but has thrived. There is absolutely no doubt that his outlook on life and his positive attitude have made this whole journey much easier to handle. And something we can commemorate. So every year, we celebrate what we call his Alive Day. It is a day that he looks forward to just like a second birthday.

This year seems extra special since we have reached the decade mark. He is our miracle and hero, not only for what he's endured, but for the way he has handled it. He once said when people ask him how he stays so positive that it is a conscious choice he makes every day to appreciate the life he's been given and that every day above ground is a good day.

As a mom, my mission since his injury has been twofold: to be there for him and his family whenever they need me and to do everything I can to make sure that his sacrifice is never forgotten. This leads me to the reason for this message. In honor of his decade anniversary and for all he's done to turn his mess into a message of hope, strength, and thriving, I would like to let him know that his sacrifice hasn't been forgotten by asking friends and family to mark his Alive Day in some special way....a card, a note, a message, a small gift, a prayer, or a random act of kindness in his name....anything you might be able to do to celebrate November 10, 2011 turning into November 10, 2021, to celebrate Adam!

Please quietly feel free to spread the word to anyone you'd like. I am hoping to make the outpouring of love and support a surprise.

Thank you for 10 years of continual support and prayers!
